I have a table that consists of everyday that a user has logged into their computer to do work. I'm trying to build an archive of everyday that a user has logged in as a changelist on the on a site I am currently building. The problem I have is that a user can have more than one computer. If they have logged into their computer at home, and then logged into another computer at work, I want to be able to handle one changelist in the archive for both computers. I am not sure how to go about doing this as the table looks like this: +-----+ | uuid | user | computer | datetime| +-----+ | d16c81eb0 | | | 2013-10-26| +-----+ 8d4e77a71 | | | 2013-11-24| +-----+----+ I'm thinking that I would have to run a query that looks up every computer (i.e. computerid) the user has access to and then if datetime is equal for each computer, to perform an UPDATE query for each, so that it shows both user and computerid in the archive and counts the number of people logging into their computer. I'm not sure how to best go about doing this and would appreciate the help. A: I was able to solve this using the UNION query. The only issue was that if a user changes their username, they would have 2 of the same event.
